

Open Donor: Xavier

Staff impression:

Xavier takes a hands on approach to life, he said if he feels more invested in the process he has greater respect for the end product, putting together his own computer and bicycle recently. He adores cycling and talks about it with joy and passion. He is in great physical shape and health.

Xavier is handsome with a chiseled jaw line and cheek bones, giving him a model-esque appearance. He has strait windswept black hair and rich brown eyes. He dresses in a trendy and up to date fashion.

This engineering student is highly intelligent and analytical. He excels in mathematics and enjoys mechanics. He is introspective and very calculated.

When we asked Xavier why he wanted to be a donor he responded, “ I have been donating blood for two years. I am an universal donor, i.e. type Rh+ O, and was happy that my blood could be used for someone who is in need of it in his critical moment. I am healthy and can recover back to normal condition after two days of donation, but a patient who severely lost his blood is in the moment where his life or death is at stake.

When I heard about the sperm donation program, I thought of the similar thing. I am in my youth, full of testosterone. But there are people who cannot have babies even if they want to for many reasons. I too want my children, and I can feel, to some extent, how they might be feeling. I was glad to hear that my sperm cells are in good condition enough to be processed cryogenically and used by others.”
